ITEM 8.01 Other Events

Office Depot, Inc. (the Company ) provides this disclosure in the interest of providing financial information that the Company deems relevant to its investors.

The Company now anticipates that its domestic sales and corporate earnings will be negatively impacted due to continued soft economic conditions. The Company notes that in its conference call that accompanied its release of operating results for the first quarter 2007, it disclosed that signs of a softening economy were beginning to negatively impact its business and that these conditions could continue. Those conditions have continued and are reflected in results reported to date by a number of other retail-oriented companies.

Office Depot now expects its North American Retail Store comparable sales for its fiscal second quarter to be down 4% to 5% following a comparable sales decline of 3% in the first quarter 2007. In addition, the weak economy has impacted sales in the Company's North American Business Solutions Division.

These lower domestic sales are expected to have a negative impact on the Company's earnings as well despite cost containment efforts that continue seeking to optimize profitable growth.

The Company will release its financial results for the second quarter on July 26, 2007.
