Dear Customer:

We are pleased to inform you that Johnson & Johnson has entered into a definitive agreement to acquire Synthes, a global developer and manufacturer of orthopaedic devices. After the acquisition is completed, Synthes and the DePuy Companies of Johnson & Johnson together will create the most innovative and comprehensive orthopaedics business in the world.

As you know, DePuy offers a strong portfolio in joint replacement and sports medicine. Synthes is a leader in several important market segments including trauma, cranio-maxillofacial and power tools. Both companies offer complementary portfolios for spinal surgery. We are confident that Synthes and DePuy together would provide you and your patients access to increased breadth and depth of technology to meet your orthopaedics needs.

We have tremendous admiration for Synthes, which is well respected in healthcare for its quality products, technological leadership and deep commitment to education and service. We look forward to bringing together the complementary capabilities of our two organizations, including product development and robust pipelines, global reach in developed and particularly in emerging markets, and deep expertise and commitment to professional education.

Ultimately, we believe this merger will enable us to better meet the needs of the healthcare community, from individual clinicians to comprehensive hospital systems, and of course, the patients we all serve.

The acquisition is subject to a variety of approvals from regulatory authorities around the world, as well as from Synthes stockholders. We expect the transaction to close in the first half of 2012. In the meantime, DePuy and Synthes will continue operating independently and it will be “business as usual” for both companies. Customer inquiries should continue to go to the companies separately, as you do today.

Please be assured that DePuy and Synthes share a dedication to the well-being of patients and an unwavering commitment to high quality, innovative products. We are committed to making operational changes resulting from the completion of the transaction as smooth as possible, and to continuing to provide the highest level of service to our customers.

We look forward to continuing to work with you to provide comprehensive treatment options for you and your patients.

Sincerely,
